Hello one and all! Exciting times here at SLAP HQ as we go to press on the first issue of the year, coinciding with the start of Independent Venue Week. There are loads of events up and down the country celebrating independent venues and this region is no exception, with events at The Frog and Fiddle in Cheltenham and the Prince Albert in Stroud. We're especially excited here in Worcester to have 6 Music's Steve Lamacq broadcasting his drive time show from BBC H&W before an event at the Marris Bar.

It's worth noting that thanks to the hard work of local promoters, Worcester is bucking the trend with new and interesting small, venues opening at a time when nationally many independent venues are facing closure.

So it's a new year, and we'll soon be moving in to the festival season. It's now the time for artists to submit their festival applications to the vast array of festivals in the UK. There's plenty of on-line resources listing where and how to apply (Sentric Music is one of our faves, with a regularly updated and comprehensive list). Having spoken with festival organisers, they receive thousands of applications, so don't be too despondent if you don't hear back. When it comes to completing an application form, we strongly advise answering the questions in full; for example if they request a link to a music stream platform or your social media links don't just put 'search my band name', they are more than likely to skip over that artist on to a correctly completed application form.

We wish all artists the best of luck with their applications to festivals in the 2019 season.

New Blood to test Carnival

There's doubt over the future of Ledbury Carnival after the failure to reappoint a chairman and vice-chairman to oversee proceedings at its AGM. Although it was agreed that last year's August Bank Holiday event had been a 'resounding success' fresh blood is needed to ensure the Carnival proceeds into its 45th year. Anyone who feels they can help is invited to contact the secretary jill\_jupp@hotmail.com

Inside Number 8

Auditions have been completed for this year's W-Factor, the talent competition for youngsters aged 11 to 18 from Wychavon in a number of areas such as dance, drama, music and comedy. The showcase final will be held at the Number 8 Arts Centre in Pershore on Monday 18 March with the winners receiving training from professional artists to help them develop - and the opportunity to perform at various events during the summer. More at wychavon.gov.uk

Nozstock & Barrell

Nozstock director Ella Nosworthy has said that the 2019 festival from 18 to 21 July will be designed to be even more family-friendly with improved camping and increased facilities. The festival was sold out in 2018 with acts including Chase & Status and Goldfrapp but still hopes to retain the feeling 'like you've wandered into a private party' - For more info see page 32 and get the latest news at www.nozstock.com

Local Soap Opera continues

Good times for local lad Luke Swatman who became an internet viral sensation last year after performing Nessun Dorma at a karaoke evening at the Eagle Vaults pub in Friar Street Worcester. The 35-year old followed local success Becky Hill by appearing on ITV's The Voice and securing a 'turn' from judge Jennifer Hudson at the recently televised 'blind audition' - so will join her team to progress to the next stage of the competition. Despite previously making an appearance on Good Morning Britain Luke was pragmatic about his new-found fame - just saying that 'the story continues' - best of luck chap...

Camra focus's on Beerfest

Slight uncertainty also at Worcester Beer Festival despite a record-breaking 9000 attendance at last year's event on Worcester's Pitchcroft with conflicting reports from the previous and current organisers regarding the CAMRA-backed festival's future. However press officer Bill Ottaway said that plans were well in place to hold the 20th anniversary event 'with new ideas and improvements' from 8-10 August - but new members to help were always welcome.

New York Seal of approval

Great news for upcoming Worcester multi-instrumentalist Poppy Waterman-Smith AKA Poppy WS who's been invited to perform at New York's oldest rock club The Bitter End after being spotted online by Billy Joel's bassist Larry Russell. It's not the first time that Poppy's hard work busking and performing at every venue possible has paid off, as she's previously supported Seal at Bridgewater Hall in Manchester to an audience of 4000 after being spotted by the chart star busking in the city earlier that day!

Already one of the most highly-rated events on the literary calendar, Ledbury Poetry Festival has an impressive line-up scheduled for this year's event from 5 to 14 July including Margaret Atwood and Ali Smith, while the festival will be launched with an appearance from Roger McGough, reading from his new collection Joined Up Writing.

Mello's Out!

Acts have been announced for this year's fourth Mello Festival to include Craig Charles' Funk & Soul Show, Brand New Heavies, Incognito and The Wonder Stuff following last year's successful relocation to the Severn End Country Estate in Hanley Castle. ## Brexit Stage Left

Local fans of acerbic comedian, broadcaster and award-winning columnist Mark Steel are in for a treat as the son of a world backgammon champion will be appearing at Evesham Arts Centre on 29 March (!) and a couple of months later at Worcester's Huntingdon Hall on 1 June with his 'optimistic' new Every Little Thing's Going To Be Alright tour - which he says 'is guaranteed to make the world seem even more mental than it is' - he's probably right...

Bennion the Jets off

Much credit and kudos to Worcester Music Festival founder, Rhythm'n'Booze blogger, pantomime scriptwriter, indefatigable promoter, plugger, soundman, guardian of the Lea & Perrins sauce formula ('If I told you I'd have to kill you') and all-round good guy Chris Bennion who's decided to retire his Not Just Sauce front after 15 years of putting on live gigs and being a treasured asset supporting the local music community. Here at SLAP we'd like to thank Chris for his immense contribution over the years and send him, Sarah and his soon-to-be growing family our very best wishes indeed!!

Make Hay Whilst

Early bird tickets have gone on sale for this year's Hay Festival which runs from 23 May to 2 June, with confirmed speakers including author Jared Diamond, Nobel Prize-winning biologist Venki Ramakrishnan and comedian/broadcaster Sandi Toksvig. # Win-Win for The Berkeley Arms!

There was some amazing news for one of SLAP Magazine's oldest advertisers, The Berkeley Arms in Tewkesbury, at the end of last year.

Laurence Mills, the licensee, was awarded the Wadworth "Best of the Best" award 2018, for the 'Tenanted Trade Pubs in Bloom' category.

The Berkeley Arms received their award at the annual "Best of the Best Awards" ceremony, sponsored by Wadworth, a regional pub operator and family brewer with over 200 pubs across the South West of Britain.

Speaking after the ceremony, Chris Welham, CEO of Wadworth, commented: "The 'Best of the Best Awards' is a brilliant event where we can show our appreciation to our great pubs and the people who put their heart and soul into running them. We are very proud of having some of the best pubs in the West Country and these awards give us the perfect opportunity to join together with our managers, business partners and team members and recognise their hard work. Pubs just wouldn't be the places they are without the fantastic people running them".

But that wasn't the end of their success, as only days later it was announced that The Berkeley Arms had won the CAMRA "Pub of the Year" award for 2018! An absolutely remarkable double.

The Berkeley is a 15th century half-timbered Grade II building, just off The Cross in Tewkesbury town centre. At the rear of the building, there's a barn, haunted apparently, which is believed to be the oldest non-church building in the town. This is used as the dining area and also serves as a meeting room.

There's a sign above the pub door that says "Real Ales, Real Food, Served in a Real Pub", to which we at SLAP would add "and with Real Music and Poetry, too". As well as a regular Poetry Slam, there's music both original and covers on Saturdays, as Peter Foster's marvellous shot of local Blues and Rock covers band The Corduroy Kings shows, and an Open Mic session on Fridays.

Congratulations to Laurence, Catherine, Ivy, and Sue - what a great team!

17th Borderlines Film Festival

Early this spring Borderlines Film Festival returns to bring the best, most thought-provoking films from across the world to this intensely rural part of the country. From 1st - 17th March the Festival will present more than 80 separate films and events in the counties of Herefordshire and Shropshire, extending to Malvern in Worcestershire and across the Welsh Border, at Hay, Presteigne and Knighton in Powys.

Screenings – more than 250 in number – will take place in multiple venues, ranging in size and location from a large, purpose-built arts centre and pop-ups in Hereford City, to theatres, community cinemas and assembly rooms in market towns, as well as village and church halls in much smaller rural communities.

Earlier in 2018, Borderlines achieved record attendances of 20,248 despite heavy snowfall over the middle weekend of the Festival. A loyal and appreciative audience that widens each year, values and engages with the opportunity to sit for 17 days at the very cutting edge of cinema.

Capernaum

Festival Director Naomi Vera-Sanso, "Our audience loves being part of a festival that is curated with cinema lovers rather than industry at its heart. Rural Borderlines may be, but it is in no sense parochial. The people who come to the Festival relish the stimulus of viewing the world from different perspectives through the medium of film."

1st – 17th March www.borderlinesfilmfestival.org

WAW Call Out For Visual Artists

Worcester Arts Workshop is hosting a visual arts exhibition to celebrate LGBTQ History Month in February 2019. The exhibition will take place in the new gallery space 'The Third Space' and the organisation is putting the shout out for applications from LGBTQ artists. The aim of LGBTQ History month is to promote equality and diversity and Worcester Arts Workshop hopes to do so by exhibiting work that celebrates the lives, history, experiences and culture of the LGBTQ community.

On 8th March it is International Women's Day and throughout that month they will host an exhibition in 'The Third Space' to celebrate. They are looking for female artists or artists whose work is themed on the subject of women to mark the occasion.

Director of Transformation at Worcester Arts Workshop, Hannah Phillips, said; "equality, diversity and inclusion are core values for us so these exhibition opportunities give a platform to often unheard voices."

Any artists interested in applying for either exhibition, please contact visualarts@worcesterartsworkshop.org.uk. For further information please visit www.worcesterartsworkshop.org.uk

Matisse comes to Worcester City Art Gallery and Museum

Joining previously unseen costumes and artwork from Diaghilev's Ballets Russes, some of Matisse's famous cut outs will be shown at the Worcester City Museum this month. Stories from the Diaghilev's Ballets Russes told through costumes, programmes and objects will be shown together for the first time in the UK alongside a Hayward Gallery Touring exhibition Matisse: Drawing with Scissors from 2 Feb until 27 April.

Diaghilev's Ballets Russes features a unique collection of costume and ephemera telling the stories of the Ballets Russes, the most spectacular and scandalous ballet company of the early 1900s. Matisse was one of many artists commissioned to create costumes and scenery for the company, the exhibition also includes work by other great artists of the period including Dame Laura Knight.

Henri Matisse was one of the 20th century's most influential artists. His vibrant works are celebrated for their extraordinary richness and luminosity of colour and his spectacular paper cut-outs were his final triumph. This exhibition features 35 lithographic reproductions of the famous cut-outs that he produced in the last years of his life. It includes iconic images such as The Snail and the Blue Nudes.

Philippa Tinsley, Curator Worcester City Art Gallery and Museum said: "We are very excited to bring these two fabulous exhibitions to Worcester. We are very proud to be the first venue in the UK to show the Ballets Russes collection, it is an extraordinary collection of objects illustrating just how spectacular the Ballets Russes was in the early 1900s. Matisse: Drawing with Scissors will be a visual delight for all visitors; spring will be an exciting time to visit Worcester Art Gallery & Museum."

Hear more about Diaghilev's Ballet Russes from the exhibition's curator on Tuesday 12th March, 1pm, £3 per person. Tickets can be booked in advance - call 01905 25371.

2nd Feb - 27th April. Both exhibitions are free. For more info: www.museumsworcestershire.org.uk

Art of the Great War

from 2 February until 1 March 2019

Paintings from World War One go on show at The Guildhall

Part of the Worcestershire World War One Hundred programme, Art of the Great War is a remarkable collection of original artworks gathered by John Noott over the last thirty years. The exhibition features paintings, prints and drawings that bring to life varied aspects of the First World War from those who served either on the front line or on the home front.

Born in 1932, John Noott's father had served in the Royal Army Medical Corps in the Great War, the second World War arrived when John was just seven years old. John has always been interested in this period in history and, as an art dealer, has been able to collect works of art from the time from both well-known and amateur artists.

John Noott, exhibition curator said: "These works show the whole scope of experiences during the Great War from the devastation on the battlefield to incredibly moving depictions of the soldiers' experiences. I hope people enjoy the exhibition and that they educate and contribute to our understanding of the impact of World War One."

Adrian Gregson, Worcester World War One Hundred Project Manager said: "I am delighted to be working with John to bring the Art of the Great War to The Guildhall in Worcester. The work on show presents an incredible snap shot of the experiences of those on the front line and in doing so is incredibly moving. Whilst Armistice has passed this isn't the end of the story and the Worcester World War One Hundred programme is keen to continue to share stories from the First World War and exhibitions like this are a great way of doing that."

Government awards £3m to transform Worcester's railway arches

Worcester's railway arches are set to be transformed into a major new cultural destination for the city, providing a hub for business and creative skills development. The funding will be used to create a new key gateway for the city, following the line of the Victorian arches from Foregate Street railway station to The Hive and the River Severn.

Eight of the arches will be refurbished, with several becoming affordable work and creative spaces, transforming the area into a modern, 21st Century workplace for creative industries, and a cultural destination for tourists and local communities.

The project will develop a leadership and entrepreneurial skills programme encouraging graduates and others to seek pathways into employment and business start-up, with opportunities for new jobs and training being created.

A festivals hub will be established in the arches, delivering cultural events across Worcester. This hub will support festival organisers, encouraging skills development and volunteer opportunities in the creative industries. The arches will also host an information point for tourists visiting the city, and continue to be a thriving vibrant home for independent retail and food offers.

Rupert Davison, joint director and proprietor of the Burger Shop in the arches, said: "This exciting news will not only benefit our business, it will be the start of the creation of a new fantastic independent quarter for Worcester that will become a really great destination in the city."

The Secretary of State for Digital, Culture, Media and Sport, Jeremy Wright MP, awarded £3m in funding to this ambitious £4.5m project, from the Cultural Development Fund. This is a new DCMS / Arts Council England fund that focuses on developing the economic impact of creative industries, arts and heritage.

The project will include improvements to the environment of the arches area, including new lighting and surfacing of the walkway, as well as key infrastructure.

The funding bid was successfully prepared by Worcester Cultural Partnership, which will match it with a further £1.5m. The Partnership is led by Worcester City Council and comprises The University of Worcester, Severn Arts, Network Rail, Worcestershire Arts Partnership, Worcestershire County Council and local businesses including Burger Shop / A Rule of Tum, Method Roastery and The Hive.

Laura Worsfold, Chief Executive of Severn Arts, said: "We are delighted that Worcester has been awarded this funding in recognition of our aspiration and ambition to become a centre for excellence in creative skills and to deliver a high quality, innovative festivals programme that encourages new and existing audiences to participate in the arts. This will have a significant impact on transforming this part of the city into a vibrant new artistic quarter for everyone."

Worcester Music Festival open band Applications For 2019 Extravaganza

Worcester Music Festival organisers are inviting artists to apply to perform at 2019's event. The festival, set to take place between 13th - 15th of September, will be a charity event with all proceeds being donated to a cause that supports the Worcestershire community.

Artists from every genre are invited to apply to play the festival through an online application form that can be accessed via the festival's website. Performers will be asked to donate their time to help bring the city's music scene together, all in aid of a great cause.

Local promoters will be given charge of a night in one of the 25 venues located in the city centre, handpicking a line-up from the artists applying. The authentic crafting of the bill has always proven a success, the incredible high quality of the musicians taking the stage drawing large crowds of both music fans and passers-by.

In recent years, organisers have expanded the line-up to include comedy spoken word and a host of workshops aimed at the whole family. The festival hosts around 250 performances and attracts thousands of visitors from across the country.

Festival director, Anthony Robbins said: "We love listening to the vast array of artists who apply and we always come away feeling incredibly positive about the amazing quality of the acts in our local music scene and beyond. We would encourage artists to put themselves forward for consideration."

To date, the festival has supported 17 charities, raising almost £55,000. Last year, the festival donated £5,307.15 to the Worcestershire Association of Carers, enabling the charity to support carers across the county through a number of initiatives.

Suz Winspear

February at last, and it feels as though we are in a world of turmoil – of political and social meltdown and uncertainty for the future. As I'm writing this, the news reports are full of parliamentary chaos, and I doubt things will be any better by the time you read it. At the moment it feels as though the only thing that we can trust and rely upon is the natural world. Despite everything, the days are getting longer and the leaves of the first spring bulbs are showing. The snowdrops and crocuses are coming through already, soon there will be blossom and new green leaves on the trees, birds will build their nests and the world will come back to life. All these dismal things that are going on in the human world will end eventually, and springtime really IS on its way.

Malvern Storytellers

Oral storytelling is one of the most ancient art forms, and continues to this day as a vibrant part of culture throughout the world. Storytelling is an ancient craft; its power is timeless because good stories will always captivate audiences, whatever the medium. Storytelling predates writing. The earliest forms of storytelling were usually oral combined with gestures and expressions. Modern storytelling has a broad purview. In addition to its traditional forms (fairytales, folktales, mythology, legends, fables etc.), it has extended itself to representing history, personal narrative, political commentary and evolving cultural norms. In Europe, much of the storytelling comes from the olden times when people would gather around in the dark nights and tell stories to each other. Indeed, many stories have been collected from the old bardic traditions.

Modern storytelling can occur in many scenarios; most people will have experienced being told a story as a child, or telling stories to one's children. Storytelling is much more than this however. Groups of people get together to hear other people's stories and to tell them to one another. They meet in pubs, clubs and people's homes. One place you can go to hear storytellers is the

Malvern Storytellers club. They meet every first Tuesday of the month at The Great Malvern Hotel in Great Malvern at 8pm. Most meetings we listen to stories told by each other. There is no obligation to tell a story, some come to tell, and some people merely come to listen. Sometimes we organise special events: several times a year we have professional storytellers come to us for an evening.

The club is in the process of organising new events for the coming year. The club has had stories told by people from many parts of the UK and even a group of storytellers from Japan.

The stories we tell come from many traditions including home-grown English, Celtic Scandinavian and the rest of the world. Whilst most of the stories are centuries-old, some are modern and some even written by the storytellers. But they are all told by the storyteller themselves, who put their take on the story. In the modern idiom, the stories are typically short (10 mins or less), but a well-trained storyteller can hold audiences captivated for longer.

Malvern Storytellers is only £2 to attend and free on your first visit. We look forward to meeting you. For more details visit the web site www.malvernstorytellers.co.uk or phone Tim Willcocks on 01684 567 721 or Peggy on 01905 831032.

worcester arts workshop

Get the Look of Love with a romantic evening of Painting at Worcester Arts Workshop

For anyone who has a love of art or an interest in the symbolist artist Gustav Klimt, Worcester Arts Workshop are offering a one-of-a-kind evening of painting on Tuesday 12 February from 7.30pm.

'The Kiss' Pop Up Painting Style Event, presented by Worcester Arts Workshop, is an opportunity for participants to create their own works of art, based on or inspired by Klimt's masterpiece The Kiss.

Widely thought of as one of the world's most romantic images, The Kiss depicts an embracing couple, created in opulent gold leaf. As an artist whose work explored the themes of intimacy and sexuality, in the early 20th century, Klimt's paintings were often seen as scandalous.

Taking place, just before Valentine's Day on Tuesday 12 February, 'The Kiss' Pop Up Painting Style Event provides a wonderful opportunity to create a beautiful personalised gift for a loved one. Or alternatively, picture yourself painting alongside your Valentine's beau - perhaps the most romantic Valentine's date ever!

The 2.5 hour workshop will take place in the relaxed surroundings of The Third Space cafe/bar at Worcester Arts Workshop. Participants will be offered guidance from a qualified and practicing artist, but are encouraged to freely explore their own ideas.

Tickets for 'The Kiss' Pop Up Painting Style Event are £25 per person and this includes all materials and tuition. Throughout the evening there will be a themed music playlist to accompany and enhance the experience, along with a complimentary glass of wine and nibbles.

Places are limited, no previous painting experience is necessary, this workshop is open to all abilities. To book a space please visit www.worcesterartsworkshop.org.uk.

Sweetart Murals | Graham Colledge

Graham is a Midland based mural artist who specialises in graffiti and hand-painted mural art. Currently based in Worcester, Graham travels throughout the UK creating hand-painted, bespoke designs for interior and exterior murals for homes, schools and businesses.

He first took his inspiration from New York graffiti artists and the flourishing American hip hop scene back in the 1980's and began creating his own graffiti; immersing himself in the culture from the beginning through to street art and today's vibrant scene. In 2008, he established Sweetart Murals and began painting for local businesses and friends to create a portfolio of work. This quickly led to work nationwide ranging from private nurseries to school murals and artwork for interior designers and businesses such as Debenhams and The Fort Shopping Park.

For interior work he prefers to use emulsions, spray paint for exterior work, any non-artist specific materials and tools such as good quality decorator's brushes and rollers. He says "I feel this helps me to stay free and loose in my painting to create work on a large scale, this also allows me to paint quicker and not focus on the final details until towards the end".

Last year he worked on a variety of different commissions including creating a bat cave in a child's bedroom with various superheroes and villains, a Harry Potter Hogwarts scene in a school, a woodland, a cloud ceiling with flying birds, a bathroom with beautiful magnolia trees and a UV underwater scene for a care home. At the moment he is working on a commission for a mural in London based around London landmarks.

Although much of his current artwork is based inside you can see some of his exterior work in Birmingham; the beer garden of The Lord Clifton in Hockley and "Our Musical Roots" mural at St Martin's Youth and Community Centre in Highgate. Perhaps a natural progression from graffiti has been a growing interest in traditional signwriting, some of which can be found on the side of the The Plough in Worcester and the Clik Clik 'Gin Lane' sign hanging at the end of the alley during the Worcester Victorian Fair. Graham also created the entry sign for the Cabinet of Lost Secrets, a music and performance venue at Nozstock The Hidden Valley in Herefordshire.

Graham is now looking to bring some large scale artwork to Worcester. If you want to see more of his work or have a mural you would like painting, you can check out the Sweetart Murals website.

Bromsgrove Festival Of Light

On 9th December, Bromsgrove Town Centre once again played host to a magical lantern parade, The Festival of Light 2018.

Created in partnership with Artrix, NWedR and Bromsgrove District Council The Festival of Light attracted hundreds of people to Bromsgrove's High Street to participate in a beautiful, illuminated celebration, alongside carnival creators Shademakers, performers and members of the community with their lanterns handmade at workshops in the build up to the event

The parade began as the sun set with families and community groups turning out with beautiful paper lanterns. They set about through the town centre in a celebration of togetherness, light and the Winter season, all to the sounds of samba band Someone At The Door. The cold December weather didn't put off the crowds and it is estimated that more than 2000 people enjoyed this festive event.

Artrix Associate Artist Kristoffer Huball was the creative force behind The Festival of Light and worked to deliver lantern making workshops with schools, community groups, families and individuals prior to the event. It's estimated that approximately 800 lanterns were created in workshops leading up to the festival.

"It's wonderful that the enthusiasm for Bromsgrove's Festival of Light is growing year-on-year. The creativity of the people of Bromsgrove shines through with the fantastic lanterns they have made and proudly displayed and the Shademakers and our carnival performers brought such vibrancy and energy to the event."

The finale of this year's Festival of Light saw Birmingham-based Balkan gypsy band The Destroyers continue the party with their lively set.

Bromsgrove Centres Manager Cheryl Welsh, who part-funded the parade, said; "I'm thrilled that this year's Festival of Light has continued to bring such joy and creativity to Bromsgrove's Community. The town centre was alive with the excitement of everyone who attended. What an exciting outdoor performance for us all to get involved in!"

Quentin Crisp | Naked Hope

Mark Farrelly's hit solo show comes to Artrix as part of a major UK tour on 13th Feb. Quentin Crisp: Naked Hope, is a much-acclaimed solo play exploring the life of an icon, the legendary Quentin Crisp at two distinct phases of his extraordinary life. Firstly in the late 1960s in his filthy Chelsea flat - "Don't lose your nerve: after the first four years the dirt won't get any worse". Here Quentin surveys a lifetime of degradation and rejection. Repeatedly beaten for being flamboyantly gay as early as the 30s, but also ostracised simply for daring to live life on his own terms.

The second part of the play transitions the audience to New York in the 1990s. Here a much older Quentin, finally embraced by society, regales the audience with his sharply-observed, hard-earned philosophy on how to have a lifestyle: "Life will be more difficult if you try to become yourself. But avoiding this difficulty renders life meaningless. So discover who you are. And be it. Like mad!".

Naked Hope is a glorious, truthful and uplifting celebration of a genuinely unique human being, and of the urgent necessity to be yourself. It debuted at the Off-West End St. James Theatre, and has toured the UK ever since.

It is directed by Linda Marlowe, much acclaimed for her own solo work including Berkoff's Women. Mark Farrelly's West End credits include Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? opposite Matthew Kelly. He is also the author / performer of a second successful solo play, The Silence of Snow: The Life of Patrick Hamilton.

Artrix, Bromsgrove. 13th February. 8pm. Tickets £14 each or £12 for concessions. are Ages 12+. For info: www.artrix.co.uk or call Box Office on 01527 577330.

Dylan Moran Cheltenham Town Hall | 4th Dec

A lone figure walks out on to the stage cradling an innocent teapot and carefully places the quintessentially English ceramic icon on the table sat centre stage. An audience member imparts a spontaneous "ahhhhhhh, how cute", the whole act is a sobering statement that reveals more than we realise...

Dylan Moran's style of comedic delivery is personal and well honed. The bemused, befuddled and baffled approach wins over the audience, as he opens his mouth to articulate thoughts and ideas that he seemingly thought of seconds before: of course this spontaneity is well rehearsed. His audience is with Moran from the start of his darkly nonsensical ("...everyone, in Ireland, over the age of 3 and a half were considered depressive!") and glaringly obvious monologues; as he repeatedly sweeps his fringe back over his forehead and away from his eyes: so nonplussed, he can focus on his observations. Dylan Moran as we know is a very funny comedian. What's more, the intelligent use of images and the inventive use of language is a genuine victory of content over style.

Without checking to see if the teapot was still warm, our host pours a small amount into his cup and continues with smaller and smaller sips...

As ever with a metaphoric black dog on his shoulder, Moran is capable of alerting us to the risible nature of world politics...on Mike Pence, "he has a smile from the back of the freezer"; he is also more than equipped to offer sideways glances at the minutiae of "our dreary and banal lives." The staccato exploration of breakfast as the "most violent of all meals," alerting us to the fact that, "cereal can only be eaten as if you have just been released from captivity," saw rows of collective shoulders shaking in acknowledgement.

I need to acknowledge that the biggest laugh gleaned on the night was aimed at everyone in the room – including Moran. To prove his views on positive body-image, he focused on the most basic of acts: showering. He compared the "beautiful water-drenched bodies in the adverts that clean their skin with natural ingredients" - whereas in reality - "we catch sight of ourselves in the mirror, looking like a pig, caught in a typhoon, trapped in a phone box, as we clean ourselves with chemical jizz." Showering this morning, I had a knowing smile on my face but not for the reasons you think. Accordingly, it would be easy to surmise that Moran is both readily embracing reality and running from the very idea...

Pouring the tea in to his cherished cup it looked incredibly weak and must have been cold after an hour or more...

A television producer once said to the lugubrious Les Dawson, "you know, you don't always have to perform drunk on stage," to which Dawson replied instantly, "What and go out and face them alone?" Dylan Moran was never alone performing on the night, the audience was with him until the end, as he heroically chased away his tigers...

Graham Fellows 'Completely Out of Character' Artrix, Bromsgrove | 30th Nov

Firstly, I have to commend this fabulous venue. Artrix in Bromsgrove is a fantastically well appointed performance space with free parking and excellent staff. Most performances are in the main auditorium but for this 'an evening with' style show, it was in the smaller studio space upstairs and although it still held a hundred people, it was sold out.

Many may not have heard of Graham Fellows but will know many of his characters such as John Shuttleworth and, in the late 70's, Jilted John. The show was superb. A humorous but real insight into his life from his youth in Sheffield and through the many ups and downs of his personal and professional life punctuated with his songs that he played on guitar and mellotron. I never thought I'd ever get to see 'Jilted John' (Gordon is a Moron) performed live but yes, youth revisited!

As expected, the delivery of his stories as with the songs was humorous but with a hint of pathos and a real northern honesty that is so reminiscent of early Smiths and Morrissey lyrics. His true life experiences have led to many of the song lyrics that he (and John Shuttleworth) still perform today such as 'Mark Ryland was my Lodger' and 'I Can't Go Back to Savoury Now'.

Pablo Raybold

'Graham Fellows – Completely Out of Character' will return to touring in January and into February and I, for one, truly recommend catching one of the dates.

Bohemian Rhapsody

No 8 Pershore | 2nd Jan

The film biopic of Freddy Mercury and Queen was never going to be a low key affair; consequently, the film is monumentally epic and the key is our love affair with Mercury and his musical achievements in life. The cinema was that full extra seats had to be drafted in front of house. Impressive. There is one word and one word only to capture the treatment of the central character in this film – sympathetic – and ladies and gentlemen what a character!

Mercury's quicksilver character was captured by Rami Malek's acting ability and strikingly similar appearance. Malek portrayed with seeming effortless ease, the goofy and callow innocent that contrasted with the toxic-tongued and contrived visionary that was the lead singer and emotional conduit of the band. His latent homosexuality, death by AIDS and his dalliance with drugs were explored with sympathetic and sensitive brushstrokes but it is his determination to succeed and entertain that is the stand out feature of a life blighted by over-exposure and acute loneliness. To paraphrase Elvis Aron Presley who stated on numerous occasions: "How can I be sat in a room surrounded by everyone I know and still feel alone?" Mercury was genuinely troubled, starting with a troubled relationship with his father, coupled with a fractious relationship with his first real girlfriend and the subsequent in-fighting with his band. Come on, it's not Astrophysics you only have to listen and study those lyrics a little closer...

I was not alone in my emotional response to the epic opening and closing scenes, that saw a cocktail stick-thin man climbing the stairs to a stage dressed in regulation 80s straight denim jeans and studded belt & armlet, accompanied by an era defining 'tache-for that emotional performance. Mercury will be remembered for his showmanship, voice, lyrics and Live Aid performance and his memory will never be alone as it will always be accompanied by a smile.

I smiled to myself, as the end of the film was greeted by spontaneous applause from a full house that had come to celebrate a monumental life.

Ben Cipolla, Mischa Jardine and the Nouvelle House Band

Beaudesert Park School, Minchinhampton | Fri 11th Jan

It's been an impressive and non-stop couple of years for young Cheltenham jazzman, Ben Cipolla, highlighted by the release of his first full album with his big band, "Jungle Kingdom" and then an appearance at The Jazz Prom at the Royal Albert Hall, in the company of Clare Teal.

It won't surprise you to hear that he's of Italian heritage, specifically Sicily, and for the first part of tonight's gig he plays solo, debuting material from his as yet unfinished new album "Sicilia", a suite of nine tracks drawing inspiration from the countryside and people of the island, one song for each of its nine provinces.

This must have been the fifth or sixth time I've seen Ben play and this outstripped any other performance I've seen from him. The voice, always smooth, has now become even more supple, the range seems extended and he's added several layers of power. His guitar playing, often overlooked when he's fronting his big band was top class tonight - fluid acoustic jazz, with nimble finger work and impressive passing chords.

The music has a lightness of touch that runs through the entire suite, whatever the subject, and there are many different inspirational sources - the refugee situation in parts of the island in 'Lavender' and a riff inspired by a construction worker's early morning whistling in 'The Golden Hour' are typical of its diversity. He's joined for one track by cellist/vocalist Mischa Jardine, whose mellow bow work and complementary voice adds much depth.

After a very civilised glass of wine in this wonderful private venue, whose Director of Music, Becky Saunders was Ben's music teacher, the Nouvelle House Band joins him onstage and the tempo picks up very nicely indeed, as his back catalogue is thoroughly reworked for the new band structure - the glorious 'Saskia', bursting with summer sunshine, the vigorous big-band sound of 'Jungle Kingdom', the light fizz of 'Copper Cappuccino' (apparently written following a singularly unappreciated busking session in Swindon...) and the mellow swing of 'Felicity Fandango'. There's new material here, too with a song about the frailties of old age and its accompanying loss of memory, being outstanding, both moving and elegant.

We get a touch of Gershwin as Mischa Jardine returns to the stage, and she remains for the final track and possibly the highlight of the set as we return to the "Sicilia" album for 'Enna', inspired by the only landlocked province of the island. It is absolutely beautiful, with Jardine's cello swelling the sound from the band, who have provided excellent and deft support throughout.

A simply wonderful evening.

“Female Voices” Poppy Waterman-Smith Chloe Mogg and Hannah Law Tower of Song, King's Norton | Sunday 6th January

There's a wonderful series of presentations developing in this very compact venue on the outskirts of Birmingham.

Curated by Stourport singer and multi-instrumentalist, Chloe Mogg the series aims to showcase the talents of a wide variety of women singer/songwriters, and after seeing a couple of these now, it's most definitely succeeding.

Hannah Law from The Wyre Forest is first up tonight, and I have a fleeting frisson of worry that the very small and unamplified ukulele she's clutching isn't going to be heard. However, with her excellent technique and the slimline, but crystal-clear sound system here, a perfect balance of instrument and voice is achieved right from outset. And it's a powerful and very rich voice, vigorously delivering a wide range of thoughtful and articulate self-penned songs. There's a surprise at the end of the set, though, as the instruments are discarded and she delivers the stunning, multiply looped acappella closer, 'Streetlight' which puts the icing on top of a very fine set.

There's an EP in the works, and if this display is any indication of what's to come, it's going to be a cracker. Great start.

Now, you've heard me talk before about the undoubted talents of Chloe Mogg, and she quickly proves that she's not just on the bill because she put it together - this is simply an artist who delivers every time you see her, and it's in the nature of her music that she doesn't deliver the same things time after time. This is no paint-by-numbers performer.

It would be lazy, not to mention flat-out rude to call her music 'quirky', rather it's a measured and brilliantly executed exercise in irreverence - her lyrics, sometimes angry, sometimes wistful are rich with metaphor, full of irony and wit and always delivered with immense panache.

16 SLAP FEB

Under normal circumstances, the wry and semi-autobiographical 'Parrot' - a reference in part to her startling multi-coloured hair would be the highlight of the set for me but tonight, it's eclipsed by the closer 'The Only One' - a brand new song featuring a glorious string-bending riff and using a crunching mid-section to fully display her excellent grasp of rhythm and pacing (her main instrument is bass) - it's an amazing finish.

Go and see this woman play - it's a real experience.

Instant fame can be a double-edged sword but Poppy Waterman-Smith (Poppy WS) hasn't let a chance encounter and duet with international singer/songwriter Seal, while busking in Manchester (now pushing 4 million views on YouTube) followed by a live onstage appearance with the same artist, make her lose focus.

Now based in Worcester, she gave us a tremendous display of her many talents in her headlining set.

The sheer number of musical influences she incorporates leaves you bewildered and fascinated - from the sumptuous neo-classical opener, 'Mercury', delivered on piano through to the elegant trip-hop of 'Shotgun', via the startling reggae/jazz amalgam of 'Someone Else' - you simply can't predict what's coming next

Not only can't you predict what style of music you'll be hearing next but predicting what instrument comes next exercises your imagination as well. She plays electric guitar, piano, ukulele, melodica and mouth organ - individually and memorably, in various combinations with each other - and she also has this very large loop station...

The set has been based around her truly imaginative EP, "Rep." and much the same as on this excellent disc, the whole thing comes gloriously together live on the night's final track 'Bella' - it's long and complex and joyous and completely jaw-dropping - the full range of instruments and her wonderful voice being expertly channelled through a series of loops to produce a musical tour de force in which the spirits of Scott Joplin, Debussy and Bob Marley collide and explode.

A fitting end to this most marvellous night of music.

Elephant Peel

Elephant Peel are intriguing. A mish-mash of eloquent influences from days gone by with a swaggering confidence that forces you to take notice. With a new EP and a release party on the 22nd February at Paradiddles lined up, I caught up with them to find out what makes them tick. Elephant Peel are: Joe Thomlinson – vocals and harmonica, Crawford Randall - Rhythm guitar and backing vocals, Randall Crawford - Lead guitar, (Comfy) Sean Gandy – bass and Guy Bradnock – Drums.

So firstly, why Elephant Peel? What's in your name?

Well I (Joe) wanted to be called The Moby Dickheads and was quickly shot down! Then we were exchanging messages and the band name came up, I was listening to a Syd Barrett Peel session at the time, the track Effervescing Elephant, the two words just stuck. When we came to release the first EP, we did a pastiche of the Velvet Underground and Nico art with an Elephant instead of a banana and it seemed perfect. I love The Brian Jonestown Massacre and the way they play around with classic LP titles and musicians' names, we've kind of continued the trend with the Stay At Home Yoko artwork. Both done by the brilliant Kristin Raidloo.

This is your last release before you record your LP in the spring. How does this EP differ from your first?

I don't think it differs drastically. We laid down a template for how we want to sound on record the first time round and figured out how we approach recording so the second one was easier. We recorded this one at JT Soar in Nottingham with Phil Booth (aka DR Phil) and basically slept in the studio for a weekend. We had an absolute blast and Phil was a pleasure to record with. I think you can hear how much fun we're having..

We played a gig at the studio on the Saturday night. You'd have to ask Phil how that went because we were about 80 red stripes deep by the time we played! We had to do the vocals the following morning after about three hours sleep!

Your sound harks back to times gone by. Who are your musical influences? How did you find your niche?

Decades of listening to Syd Barrett, The Kinks, The Beatles and The Velvet Underground! Those are probably the big influences but then there's The Buzzcocks, Jennifer Gentle, Bob Dylan, The Only Ones and The Small Faces ..... the list is pretty much endless! We just really love songs. 50% of our rehearsals consist of us playing each other songs, we pretty much write the songs we want to hear.

It feels like some of the song content is based on personal experience? I was particularly intrigued by the track "Beecher Street" is this a real place?

Lyrics are such a huge thing for me. I always strive to have meaningful subject matter, but I like to use ambiguous phrasing and words with double meanings to throw people off the scent. You want the listener to take their own meaning from a song without spelling anything out.

Beecher Street was actually written by Guy our drummer. He's written probably 50% of the stuff we have for the LP. It's about being skint, living in squalor, being hopeless and just putting up with it. Something I think is quite relatable for people in the UK right now. It is a real street but it's in Washington DC and is the home of Dischord records. That doesn't have any relevance to the song, it just sounded good!

How do you write the songs within the band? Does one person turn up with a complete song or is it a collaborative effort?

There's no set way. Sometimes one of us will bring a finished track, sometimes it's a nearly finished one and we tidy it up. On Climb the Ocean, Crawford wrote the chords, Randall came up with the melody, I wrote the lyrics and we arranged it as a whole band. With Stay At Home Yoko, in proper Beatles style, I wrote the most of lyrics but we came up with the middle eight as a band. It was Dr Phil who arranged that one and the Sax player from his band Slumb Party played organ on it.

Do you have a favourite track on the EP? Why?

No. They're all ace.

You're headlining Paradiddles on the 22nd February, what's next for Elephant Peel? Any plans for a larger tour?

We want to do a tour of gigs in people's kitchens. Get in touch if you have a kitchen.

Spencer Cater Leaving Lost Vagueness

Described as Lou Reed & They Might Be Giants meet James Taylor, West Midlands artist Spencer Cater also known as Spence, resides in the lovely Cotswolds. Storming his way through various bands in the 90's and noughties, Spence now is a solo performer who also collaborates with other artists. Released in November last year, "Leaving Lost Vagueness" was produced by Michael Clarke (David Brent, Dan Whitehouse, Clarksville.)

As for the album, it's engaging and eclectic. With tracks such as First & Last dealing with a romanticised energy hoping that their relationship will be their first and last, this subject is a strong message throughout the album. Best Part of My Day has a Jason Mraz twinkle, whereas tracks such as Relationship & Ready for Love Now are just damn warming with Spence's own flavour of love.

A personal favourite of the album has to be Close Enough to Hurt, the simplicity of this track is poured through every pore and it does feel close enough to "Hurt" ... as in the Johnny Cash cover. The sharp ending is brutally honest of how our emotions take over us and make us hurt even more sometimes. Songs such as Disease and Borrowed Shell are also strong contenders on this commercial album. Title track, Leaving Lost Vagueness (try saying that fast and it sounds like Las Vegas) is a lot different to all the other song arrangements, this tune is more electronic based. With songs Love this Christmas & I Saw Three Ships concluding this pop orientated album on a high, it leaves us feeling warm and ready for the most wonderful (expensive) time of the year. Petition for Spence Cater to be Christmas No 1!!! (Maybe next year - Ed)

Tyler Massey All the Pretty Lights

Folk-rock singer-songwriter Tyler Massey's second EP All The Pretty Lights is somewhat of a departure from his previous EP American Nightmare. Alongside Tyler's distinctive Americana sound, there is an immediately noticeable increase in guitar effects, often verging on the psychedelic!

The whimsical name of the title track is juxtaposed with an undercurrent of subdued menace in the verses which dramatically explodes in the choruses- amid layered vocal tracks and Eric Hej's percussion. The panicked, pleading refrain- "I want you to take me out of my head" seems almost a mission statement for this EP.

The themes of anxiety and alienation - whether political or personal - run through almost every song here. How to Complete an Emergency Stop reminds us that "you can't watch the news without your supplier, you'll need something for the pain". In contrast, the music is some of Tyler's most propulsive. The guitars all shimmering arpeggios and staccato stabs, the drums hypnotic, and producer Alex Knight's intricate bassline reminiscent of Andy Rourke's work with The Smiths.

I Was Wrong is the most traditionally Tyler Massey of the tracks here, built around sparsely fingerpicked acoustic guitar and confessional lyrics, until gorgeous strings (performed by Tilly Chester) well up like a rising tide, before falling away to leave just the guitar and Tyler's pleading vocal. The upbeat, folkly Shoulder to the Wheel restores the balance. Besides boasting one of Tyler's most gratifying melodies, this track really showcases the recording and mixing of the EP, the guitars crisp and bright without overshadowing the other instruments. Once again, the lyrics espouse the comfort and meaning found in relationships with loved ones, "light in the dark" that offers relief from society's ills.

Sleeper, a fixture of Tyler's recent live shows, continues to explore the discontent of living in the modern world, and the need for human intimacy as an anaesthetic. The lyrical theme of sleep is reflected in the dreamlike state of the music, and the backing vocals on the chorus seem almost hymnal. The instrumental Waltz for Lily, written for Tyler's daughter's wedding, perfectly accompanies the other tracks in this collection both sonically and thematically, despite the lack of vocals.

As a whole, All The Pretty Lights strikes the right balance between exploring new ideas and remaining recognisable to fans of Tyler's earlier work. The songwriting remains skilled and memorable, but a wider range of instruments (notably djembe drums and electric guitars) and textural and dynamic variation makes for a very engaging listen.

All The Pretty Lights is launched on the 23rd February 2019 at Elmslie House in Malvern.

Insomniacs

You won't feel a thing

Remember when you were a teenager and melodic skate punk seemed to embody everything you thought? Well, I do, and the Insomniacs have taken me back to that time. From their opening tracks that urge you to “Stop thinking, start drinking” this album’s upbeat varying surges in tempo are almost addictive. There’s a feel of insistence in the lyrics which is backed up by catchy pop hooks and some truly melodic moments that are reminiscent of early Hundred Reasons. The song ‘P.M.A’ is relentless, broken up with raunchy harmonies and a thrashing guitar that reminds me of a circle pit. The band insist they’ll “Do anything, but just not today” embodying the old punk attitude and mixing it nicely with a jumping glib edge that I love.

“Strike the match and walk away;” ‘Expectations’ is a song that smacks of the complete sense of aggressive abandon so many of us feel. What’s unusual is the interjection of slowed middle eights, dramatic changes and decelerations of tempo that stops the feeling of boredom that I so often suffer when listening to punk albums. ‘All my friend’s are stupid’ contains the Trashy-fun lyrics “All my friend are stupid because all my friends think that I’m stupid” it’s an excellent bouncy tune, like more socially acceptable pop-punk.

‘Good Intentions’ has one of those choruses that makes you want to sing a long. The vocals have a clear ring to them despite their raspy punk style. I hope it’s clear by now that I really like this album.

So, we’re on the home stretch and I’m saving most of my word-count for ‘Dance with your Demons.’ This is one of those end of album songs where the band show you that they have the ability to take things seriously. The description of never wanting to “feel the weight of this world,” lack of eye contact and despondency during a body aching Sunday is an, often universal, feeling of hungover melancholy that follows so many people who are lonely and isolated within their lives. Sometimes these ‘deep’ songs can be a bit jarring (I’m looking at you Blink-182) but this actually works really well with the band’s established style for the rest of the album, the harmonies compliment the subject matter. I’m sold.

Elephant Peel

Stay at home Yoko

Last time I reviewed Elephant Peel, I felt like I was listening to a surrealist version of The Kinks that you couldn’t avoid tapping your feet to. With their new EP ‘Stay at Home Yoko,’ Elephant Peel don’t disappoint. The EP opens with its title track which, after a quick drum roll, launches into a blaze of harmonica and twangy vocals that lament “We’re never how we used to be.” What I like about Elephant Peel is the feeling of self awareness that seems to shine through their lyrics “I’m a hypocrite it’s easy to see” stands aloft in a song full of criticism regarding the boring changes in others, be it growing up or being no-fun. This opening offering feels full of energy, the song’s ending is followed by the whoops and cheers of a live recording and makes the listener feel completely present and involved with the performance.

The song ‘Beecher Street’ immediately reminded me of my own teenage years growing up in a place where you meet “deadbeats and dropouts” and you’re “dead on your feet.” The piano in this track is incredible, somewhere between a Wild West tavern and the Fratellis, it’s organised chaos contrasts brilliantly to an extremely tight overall performance full of happy, upstrummed guitars. The idea of dreaming from the gutter is a universal truth present in so much music. There’s great lyrical humour that comes with the longing to get out of the doldrums: “Beecher Street, you’re so obscene, your face is dirty and your teeth are green.” I’ve looked up Beecher Street and there’s one in Halesowen, for now, I think its best I avoid it.

Moving on to ‘Climb the Ocean,’ a vigorous guitar leads the way into such an uplifting track. The main thing I loved about this song was the harmonies, wistful Ohhs and ahhs smack of a late 60’s vibe that I don’t hear enough of.

Finally, “The Rut Strut” reminds you of every annoying situation/relationship you’ve been stuck in. The sense of irritation is palpable: “I’m tired of you and I’m tired of me” This song is full of punchy guitars and feels shorter, simpler and faster than the previous tracks. Its simplicity is the reason it works. That feeling we’ve all encountered of short tempered frustration is excellently expressed in the form alongside the lyrics. I loved this EP and the consistency in the style offered by Elephant Peel is brilliant, the ability to express multiple subjects, including universal truths, elation and complete exasperation in a persistent form is the reason these guys will go far.

Shotgun Marmalade Hopeless Row

Sid River, known under the stage name of Shotgun Marmalade, released Hopeless Row back in August. Mainly playing as a solo act, the album features a more filled sound complimented by a backing band. Now I will be honest, from the first look at the album cover, I thought I was about to review a tribute album to The Clash's London Calling, the font is pretty similar. Saying that, musically, think the rawness that The Beat showcased in their lively, ska-esque sets, but twisted with the punk nature of The Sex Pistols. Pretty cool, huh? From the get go, your foot will be stomping throughout this album.

Taking us through many versions of Shotgun Marmalade, tracks such as Denim Credibility will make your head turn to find who's making that exceptional sound. Many Feet Are Dancing vocally reminds me of No More Heroes by The Stranglers which is obviously going to be a quirky compliment. Making the album feel a lot more personal for locals around the West Midlands, Tale of a Stourbridge Lad is a folk tale what can only be thought of as a biography for Sid or someone he knows very well. Versatility through the album builds and builds. There's a folk, punk, ska essence to every track in a way. Hidden with political messages here and there, According to All Sources follows rules of people falling into traps. Be more original and unique at the end of the day. There's so many toxic people that turn others in relationships.

A humble album filled with all the right aspects to make it a well put together experience.

Delphini | If Only

If Only daringly casts it's net wider into the subconscious of indolent counter culture.

'Fascinating': begins with an ominous percussive pattern of immediacy reminiscent of Bonham, twinned with gnarly snarling oscillations, a bass winds in rapidly harking back towards less wandering dub followed by a subtle delayed guitar. It's spoken word intoned phase building to quick accents of cow bell – "You're fascinating, That's what I reckon, A minute with you Would be gone in a second."

All at once you are enveloped in the synaesthetic geometric web of intrigue that is Delphini! A supergroup quartet comprising of seasoned kosmic psychonauts who have previously cut their teeth in the likes of prolific outfits Glowpeople (Rod Noverly – drums/fx, Chris Cordwell – Keys/ Synths/ Fx,) Bable (Lee Car – bass also of Sonic Trip Project), and Third Quadrant (Shaun Baley – Guitar, also of Monkeytrial).

Built on a solid foundation of rhythm and groove, Car's bass and Noverly's insightful yet sensitive percussion propel each cut here with panache and precise incisions, showing a formidable melodic reinforcement whilst underpinning atmospheric forays of swirling fx tapestries and engaging incendiary Eddie Hazel esq lead licks.

'Nova Bass': - follows luring us in further with a mantra and its quick metronomic swaying couplets, with juxtaposition of keys this brings to mind a bizarre cross of Ozric Tentacles meets the faux French Indian exotica of keyboardist Korla Pandit.

'Open Mind': - here we are cocooned in warm tendrils, notch cut melodies trail over vast open spaces submerged as submarine frequencies exploring the depths snorkelling a reef for serendipitous serotonin between coral.

'Burst Fruit': Taps into the collective's spacey motorrock sensibilities.

'Loin' is more like Tangerine Dream, a care free, serene flower unfurling in strata beams of sunlight, reaching petals upwards.

'In The Trees': - with it's fizzing 8 bit sway, accentuated percussion in a hazy reflective bosanova is somewhat reminiscent of a more electronic Penguin Café Orchestra meeting trip hop happy producers in a lift. The spoken word here is a meditative kabbalah affirmation of individualist silviculture : "I'm climbing my tree /As you're climbing yours / Decisions are branches / We're climbing through doors / We're on different boughs / We're moving apart / Further away /Than we were at the start."

Recorded live in their own habitat 'If Only' appropriately captures the intimacy of this rising band sans any studio gloss. Just as you would encounter them at a festival or small club.

The Naughty Corner Ukeleidoscope

Local ukulele fun-da-mentalists, The Naughty Corner return this month with a brand full length affair, their third and most varied album to date, entitled rather aptly, Ukeleidoscope.

Now don't worry, the three-piece haven't gone all avant-garde or lost their sense of humour, but they have expanded their sound with a nod to ska, a wink to Noel Coward and a brief flirtation with punk. The band deliver their most rounded album to date. Of the eleven tracks on offer, only four are covers, whilst the originals see the band tackle the big issues such as mobile phone obsession, and trying to keep up with the latest trends in their own unique way.

The band open proceedings with one of the aforementioned covers, although you could easily mistake the John Farnham obscurity Sadie The Cleaning Lady as a 'Corner original with its delightful tongue in cheek lyrics and infectious melody. Throw in the band's own bubbly delivery, contagious choral harmonies, a kazoo solo and viola, the Naughty' ones deliver the perfect opener.

From such insatiable beginnings, the band change direction and indeed mood as Smokescreen sees the group tackle relationship issues with a plucked intro and a straight face. And whilst the song is lifted by those harmonies, The Naughty Corner prove they're more than capable of playing it straight.

The surprises keep coming as the band take us to Havana for a Latin flavoured ode of wanton desire as She Sets Me On Fire, aided with the continuous shake of a tambourine, choppy strums and stunning, complimentary duel nationality vocals, this listener is in the mood for a rumba. Smobie sees the band deliver a spiky punk chant, as the band try to avoid the smart phone zombie as they take to the streets. Elsewhere, originals like Fomo sees the band attempt to keep up with the Jones's, whilst an inventive Ska Medley showcases the trios' harmonious melodies at their best, as they unite The Specials' Message To You Rudy, Blondie's Tide Is High and a certain Peter Andre's Mysterious Girl, with an infectious effortless ease that'll have you singing along before you realise.

Ukeleidoscope sees The Naughty Corner expand their vision, whilst retaining their humour and likeability to deliver their most essential disc to date. Grab a copy and a smile at the door when The Naughty Corner next take to the streets, or commander your local and keep those winter blues at bay.

Joe Joe Jims a 'new' LIVE MUSIC venue, in Rednal

Fletchers Amusement Arcade was founded in 1920 on what was then a busy highway between Birmingham (Longbridge) and Bromsgrove. Even in my early days behind a wheel, this route was still in heavy use with mechanical monsters populating a deep scar off North towards the West Midlands. The Arcade still stands, complete with rows of bandits, penny slot machines and even crazy golf. The bar is limited but has craft ales and plenty of spirits while around the corner you can find coffee percolates and inside the entrance, Pizza ovens welcome you with tempting aromas and warmth.

Crammed between bandits, slot machines, videos and pick 'n' mix, lies a moderate stage where I have enjoyed a few gigs running up to Christmas. I have to say, the combination of casino glitz and blitzing bands makes for a wonderful quirky atmosphere and I highly recommend a visit.

Paul Bridgewater and his newly formed Electric Blues Rebellion drew me to the neon lights first. It was only their 3rd live session and they were, er.... electric. They performed a blistering set full of funk and rock. All the way from a 'World Gone Crazy', a storming, 'Rock Me Baby', the sultry blues of 'I Just Wanna Make Love to You' and getting Stoned out on 'Tumblin Dice'. Paul, as ever, showing just why he's one of the best rock vocalists around in the UK.

I returned for the first ever Sunday 'lazy afternoon gig' which just so happened to also be the last day of Matt Woosey's UK tour before he returned home to Germany. A stupendous, 'Let It Flow' sums up Matt's full band: electric lead with rhythm woven around Matt's acoustic guitar. It contrasts with the organic, eclectic, jazz-fused 'Lighthouse' which sees Michael on keyboards sweeping in the atmospheric waves over Dave and Lukas's rhythm.

Matt closed on his strutting cock version of 'Lil Red Rooster', preening and pecking his way to close a wonderful Sunday of music lifted from his 'Live At Gallagher's Nest' album.

So, you've rolled a few coppers down the slots, twisted an arm or two maybe, sipped some ale, and you're ready for the buzz that always accompanies Arcadia roots. I was drawn back again to see the Dave Small, Danny Gauden, Tom Callinswood, and Josh Terry collective. Kicking off with the Reggae ripped rhythm of 'Where You Gonna Run To', Arcadia Roots create their intoxicating atmosphere which seems to fit so well in Joe Joe Jim's as fans slot in between machines.

Led Zep's, 'Whole Lotta Love' gets saucy with a spicy coat of Levi Roots Reggae. A 'new' 'Take Me Higher' brings the dual percussive strike of Tom joining Dave on drums and djembe, beating up the rhythm over the heavy bass rumble and Danny's guitar. Arcadia Roots bask in the glow of the arcade, and it made for a brilliant evening.

There's plenty more live music in the pipeline, bands are being added as we move on into 2019. Check the website for details, at www.joejoejims.co.uk

From the Jam

Cheltenham Town Hall | 18th Jan

Like most in the audience I grew up listening to and believing in the Jam. The modest guitarist supporting the headliners clearly grew up listening to Oasis b-sides and Jake Bugg. I am not complaining, our Newport troubadour Jake, successfully charmed - a "tunnel-visioned" crowd determined to celebrate their band - with his open chord vignettes of everyday life.

In 1982 our young lives stalled fleetingly, in the winter of our disbelief, as a result of the Jam disbanding. I remember blinking incomprehensively at the TV, as the news spread like an unwanted cold sore. This was our band! They looked like us, dressed like us, articulated our opinions, listened to our music, voiced our anxieties and captured our first pangs of love and desire. Who could do justice to this legacy?

From the Jam are touring the 40th celebration of the All Mod Cons album and respectfully allow the songs to resonate and echo down the years with convincing stage versions. The songs themselves are as pertinent and contemporary as a knowing look when Brexit is whispered in polite society. From the Jam are well aware that the songs mean so much to their devotees and are respectful of the history, allowing the songs to speak for themselves. The legacy of Weller's All Mod Cons album is apparent for all. Clearly, From the Jam, are more than capable of protecting and projecting the legacy...a task about as easy as changing Paul Weller's mind.

Foxton's incarnation were tasked with negotiating their way through a one and a half hour set: one they achieved with a well-honed professionalism. Helped in no small part by the accomplished lead singer, Russel Hastings, whose insouciant swagger is, oh so familiar, he even grips his guitar like a loaded weapon. All strangled proceedings were matched by the nonchalant metronome of a drummer who made the rhythm section all his own (I can still feel the drum beats, thumping in my chest, if I close my eyes). The energy and urgency of the evening ignited with the selective hits finale that witnessed the soundman punching the air and singing along, along with a frontline of fans that created an atmosphere reminiscent of those heady days of the late 70 and early 80s: "There was even one gent dressed in regulation white towelling socks and loafers for Christ's sake." From the Jam not only did justice to the legacy- they lit up Cheltenham Town Hall with "fire and skill"...

The happy and thankful phalanx of co-believers and all the Mods were conned (ahem) by the willing suspension of disbelief for 90 minutes: as the band and the fans kicked off! Big time!

For the record, the line: "The way the sunlight flits across your skirt, makes me feel I am from another world, to touch your face in the morning light, I hope you are always going to be around..." is still one of the most beautiful and poetic lines that this, then 14 year old, has ever read. Just how did Paul know what I was feeling and thinking?

Dick Whittington (script by Chris Bennion) Norton Theatre Group | 10-12 January 2019

Not sure whether it's me getting older or more probably sillier but I did enjoy another seasonal offering of slapstick, gratuitous overacting, singalong ditties, dodgy in-jokes and the traditional audience involvement at Norton Theatre Group's production of Dick Whittington. It's one of the few pantos based on a real-life story, but in this case only providing a minimal framework for Chris Bennion's wacky and often off-beat script - always a good sign!!

The real-life Dick Whittington was from Gloucester, so we start at his mother's decidedly dubious cafe in the docks with its one-dimensional murine-based menu. Sarah Floenza Barbarella Gertrude Whittington (Paul Jones) is very proud of her son (Rob Milner) who aims to impress his sweetheart Alice (Rebecca Smith) by becoming Mayor of London. Sadly his plans are foiled by the evil power-crazy King Rat (Vicky Blake) who concocts a flurry of fake news in the gutter press to smear the innocent Dick, plans an unsuitable ballot-box-stuffing campaign (sounds familiar?) and finally recruits her, sorry his Rat sidekicks Deano, Franky and Sammy (Chris Daly, Sarah Bennion and Yvonne Ralphs) to shanghai Dick and spirit him overseas aboard Captain McSplash's (Carl Ives) leaky lugger.

Not looking promising at this time for our hero, but the tale departs even further from the traditional as the boat founders and the occupants are improbably washed up three miles from Las Vegas where naturally Elvis himself (Michael Fox) is the first person they meet! Dick shows his mettle by foiling the Rats' attempt to rob The King's casino with the help of his cat Shadow (Jake Hurley) - so Elvis rewards him with a wad of greenbacks and the use of his yacht to return to London - bear with me on this...

King Rat is persuaded to apologise for the printed slurs and a nail-biting election comes down to the casting vote of the Rat sidekicks who repay their boss's ill-treatment and niggardly wages settlement by voting for Dick to be Lord Mayor - well he did give them cheese to eat after all... Probably not therefore a tale for the historical purist - but a thoroughly chucklesome offering with plenty of humour for the kids and not-so-young in equal measures from the pen of Mr Moldiwarts himself!

Marcus Brigstocke Evesham Arts Centre | 2nd Dec

Critics and journalists alike criticise female comics for only talking about being female or for solely highlighting the female condition. Our support comic this evening, Rob Rouse, is just as guilty; consistently, observing his middle-aged and middle-class life through a magnifying glass normally used for reading 6pt font on food packaging. Rouse is a Dad and he never lets you forget it, this is no criticism but the constant hour long references to Dad dumps, crap holidays with kids and curry infused flatulence only allows for knowing nods and smiles rather than genuine guffawing. However, the final one-liner about the combined eye test and prostate check was worth the wait... "better with or better without?"

The set up for the main act - Marcus Brigstocke - revealed that the comedian had been replaced by the devil himself, one: "Louis Cipher." We are privy to cheap theatrics, ambient lighting, unsettling red face paint and stuck on horns that, if nothing else, ensured our attention. The sight of a middle-aged man frolicking to an unknown track did make for painful viewing though...

The central premise of the whole show - entitled "Devil May Care" - was a quasi-intellectual exploration of the dichotomy between good and evil, and how we judge what is acceptable and what is morally questionable. Tentatively enquiring which audience members watch porn bought the predictable stunned silence. The only audience member to respond, a 36 year-old lady, earned the respect from everyone for her honesty. For which she was pardoned by Old Nick himself!

As we know society is conveniently split in two: "pre-avocado and post-avocado." I grew up thinking avocado was a colour, an aspirant colour no less for your bathroom suite. The evening's audience I think was made up of a mainly post-avocado oeuvre and this once again was reflected in the at times obvious targets: Waitrose (tick), Donald Trump ("an oversized whatsit with yellow pubic hair for a wig"...tick), Radio 4's preoccupation with grammar (just three or four examples? You do the math[s]...Tick)

As one journalist summed up the show - just the same jokes and topics, "with a fresh lick of red paint." - and yes, I wish I had thought of that line!

Unlike the President of America, I am pleased that we ventured out in the rain (See what I did there? tick). The ironic sermonising from Brigstocke was at times relentless and yes predictable, although, he saved his most important declarations for the final minute of the show and of course Boris belongs in hell but Marcus is correct and the devil is in the detail: "If we don't keep using Evesham Arts Centre and offering our continual support..."

My girlfriend is no journalist, but I will allow her the final insight... "I am glad we went and it was entertaining but I can't remember one joke from the night."

Tankus The Henge

The Marrs Bar | Friday, Feb 22

Tankus the Henge have built their reputation on unforgettable songwriting, spectacular live performances and relentless hard work, playing hundreds of shows across Europe and building a devoted fan base along the way.

"...I love that. It reminds me of a mixture of early Kinks, Squeeze and a bit of Blur mashed in. His voice is his own, ...so great. I love it." Dave Davies – The Kinks

Their funk-fuelled repertoire is wildly eclectic, ranging from New Orleans inspired swing to heavy rock riffs, and since their beginnings in the ratty alleyways of London's Soho, the band has evolved into a wild groove machine.

Musically inspired by bands from the British invasion of the 60s and artists such as Tom Waits, Blur, Randy Newman and Queens Of

The Stone Age, and with lyrics influenced by 20th Century American literature, specifically the Beat Generation and Gonzo journalism, Tankus the Henge defy categorisation. Their hair-raising show, like no other, has to be seen and heard to be believed. Like a psychedelic, rock n roll octopus – only with four more legs.

Buy the ticket, take the ride.

Perhaps best known for his song-writing prowess, Steve is also a blinding, dazzling guitarist with a style echoing the elaborate rhythmic 'folk baroque' of Bert Jansch and Davy Graham, but also drawing from classical, roots and the tradition to create a style that is typically Tilston.

Advanced tickets are £12.50, available at The Old Rectifying House, the Kestrel Gallery in Sidbury and at the Tourist Information Centre at the Guildhall in Worcester.

Starlite Campbell The Iron Road | Pershore | Thurs 13th Dec

Suzy Starlite and Simon Campbell open their box of mince pie treats, to fans and gathered families who have tracked across to the Iron Road, on this cold December evening. Apart from the pies, they are joined by Johnny Henderson on Hammond, and the legendary Steve Gibson on drums.

Simon takes up the lead and vocals for a personal perspective in "Brother", taken from his 36 album; a blues smoked eulogy with Suzy pumping out the bass.

Suzy turns to a foxy, funky bass sound, while Johnny layers in some Hammond over Steve's rhythm, and Simon on his hollow-bodied custom Drake, setting up the imploring "I Need A Light". Somebody save his soul, because it's about move up a gear. Steve and Suzy punch out the beat as the hard, rock-edged "Preacher Of Love" calls out, with Hendo swirling out those ivory inlaid notes from the spinning Lesley horns. I Like It Like That!

Cutting into their Blueberry Pie, we're offered up a slice of sultry blues served with rich tasty guitar leads, as Simon pours out the passionate lyrics of "I Cry Over You", before fronting up to his amp, feedback fuzz fading out the song. Suzy is feeling "Guilty" as she takes up the vocals on the slow, throbbing confessional.

Next we jump back to 36, and Simon's having "Misgivings", as he sets out on the road with Dylan on the radio. The effervescent, jazz-spattered blues rides the Gibbons groove over ever organic keys.

The sweet sounding Drake is put aside for the rock-meisters Telecaster; Johnny turns to piano, Steve's whipping up the rhythm with Suzy's bass, and Simon is "Hot As Hell"! The bass gets heavy, as the steaming, rock-edged riffs tumble from the bedrock Fender for "Sex Is The Key"; sultry, suggestive and sublime. Suzy is slinging her short-scale Gibson, punching out a heavy rhythm on top of the pumping bass drum, and "Mr Big" swaggers across the stage while the Iron Road rocks out. We soon come back for another slice of pie, this time the superlative, slinky blues of "Walkin' Out The Door". Simon works over his Maestro Echoflex, adding colour to this fabulous song; the featured single from their Blueberry Pie album. It's a tough song to follow, but when such a pinnacle has been scaled we're all up for more. A shiver goes down the backbone and even the band are "Shaking All Over".

A grand finale is inevitable; such is the nature of live music: it ain't over till it's over, or someone switches the power off. A medley spins out, and Simon's on a roll, stretching and cajoling his way through the songs. "Cocaine" is handed out, Bowie's "Fame" tumbles into place, we're back on the powdered stuff; it's a brilliant closure full of guitar hedonism. The reverb off the Echoflex oscillates through the room while the amp screams its frenzied feedback, wah-wah is pumped, and Hendo is drives the Hammond hard. Steve is given his lead on the percussion while Suzy runs some riffs on the deep-throated Mike Lull Custom bass, and the band exhaust the final drops of energy into the night, closing a resounding Iron Road gig.

The band have released a double vinyl album of the renowned Blueberry Pie, sadly a bit out of reach for my pockets on the night, but they will no doubt be many finding their way into Christmas boxes, as Starlite Campbell tour right up to Christmas before heading back to their Isle Of Man base.

Matt Woosey Band Elmslie House, Malvern | 25 Nov '18

If your idea of the perfect blues club is a dingy basement with coal-black walls and sticky floors, then Elmslie House ain't for you. Built in the 1860s and operating as a girls' school from 1921-1994, the house is now a privately-owned concert venue in the heart of Great Malvern and tonight sees the return of local hero, Matt Woosey, on a short UK tour away from his home in Germany. Matt is a spectacularly good guitarist and a fine singer and his star really should be shining brighter. With his regular band flanking him onstage, he sticks to his acoustic for almost the whole gig, letting the band add the musical light and shade.

The set closely mirrors the band's recently-released live album and is the perfect showcase for Matt's singular brand of blues; one that leans and sways in several tantalising directions but always lies rooted in the kind of funky, rolling grooves that Sean Taylor purveys and the late, great Terry Callier specialised in. 'Cruel Disposition' and 'Find A Way' set the tone of the first set immediately, the band falling in behind Matt with dependable ease. Close your eyes and it's not hard to hear prime-era John Martyn. 'Same Old Blues' is anything but (complete with its exhortation not to compare him to Seasick Steve ("I got my blues and he got his")), leading to a masterful solo take on Dolly Parton's

'Jolene' that segues into the hotbed of 'Don't Tell Nobody'. The second set ramps up intensity and tempo, Woosey's impressive slide-playing to the fore. Willie Dixon's 'Little Red Rooster' gets a full makeover and 'Hook, Line And Sinker', 'I've Seen The Bottom' and 'Black Smoke Rising' are simply great, bluesy rock songs, played to perfection. And after a near two-hour set, and the encore of 'Lighthouse', Matt leaves the stage to a standing ovation, the band carrying the song home with mellow guitar licks and jazzy, atmospheric keyboards: a fitting end to a consummate performance.

The Luke Doherty Band

St James RC Church, Welland | Sat 12th Jan

As regular visitors to local festivals, such as Upton and Gloucester Blues, as well as those purveyors of fine music, The Prince Of Wales and The Iron Road, Luke and his fellow troubadours found their way to more sacred ground. On a dark, cool night, this lovely church seemed a rather remote location, but then they are from the valleys, so maybe they felt at home. Stone surfaces and high roof, can present tricky acoustics, but provide plenty of space for Luke's soaring riffs to be aired. Even the water seemed to have turned into wine, and a feast awaited the band, to bridge the break between sets, fuelling an explosive second set and probably the long drive home.

They warmed up with a buzzing "King Bee", Luke on his Les Paul, vocalist and harpist Paul Morgan, the bassment tones of Mal Preest, and frenetic drums, beaten by Simon Parratt. We're soon dipping into their 2018 album release, Night & Day, and the punchy rock of "Have You Thought About That?" The song reflects on life today, with eyes glued to a smart phone, CCTV following us everywhere. Have you thought about that? Thumping drum and bass power out through the aisle, projected from the apse, while Luke's guitar only gives way for Paul's provocations.

A harp-blown, drum-driven "Reaper" has Luke scything in on a bed of rapid-flowing rock, with no fear of any grim apparitions on such hallowed ground, but a superb groove nonetheless. Luke launches into a "Plastic Sea", over thunderous rhythms from Mal and Simon. Fish filled with plastic swim through a tidal surge of beautiful, sweet tasting guitar, before crashing back through the rising wave of bass and drums.

Tracking firmly in the grooves of the excellent Night & Day, an impassioned and tear jerking "When You Cry" fills the lofty void above our heads. Luke serves up a feast of gorgeous guitar while Paul delivers the heartfelt lyrics and bleeding harp of what is one of the highlights of an album full of delights. Close your eyes and let it wash over you.

You're not going to get through one of Luke's gigs without having your ears pinned back by a bit of Hendrix. Simon lets rip for a stupendous "Watchtower", with Luke on his Strat, bending strings for the classic. "John Lee Boggie" delivers a shuffling rock n' roll, Simon sticking it to the boys, as Luke's guitar dances on the rhythm, boogie-ing all night long. A splash of funk, and the dazzling "Solar Flares On The Sun", which should have closed the service - but there was to be a final hymn, another nod to Hendrix. Luke worships perhaps a personal 'god', as "Little Wing" drifts into the heavens; a stunning guitar solo, with Mel having his moment on bass, and Simon beating the retreat, to close a brilliant evening of rock and blues, preaching at St James RC Church.

Dan Patlansky

Artrix, Bromsgrove | 28 Nov '18

It had been a while since seeing Dan, and only 15 miles up the road it was a 'no brainer'! Dan and his band; Tom Swann on bass, Tom Gatza on keys and Jay Bone on drums, were playing to a nicely filled theatre with its spacious stage. Personally I prefer a more intimate setting, allowing the bands to get in close and connect. That said, there is no mistaking the quality, never mind the width!

Dan's Stratocaster chops out 'Love City', which reminds me how gritty Dan's voice is; it certainly ticks the box for hard rocking blues. 'Johnny' brings soaring, diving guitar chords, over pumping drum and bass, and we are up and running. In a 'Heartbeat', thumping rhythm is pulsed into life, as dirty guitar kicks in and Dan sprays out the lyrics of a gloriously grungy rock blues. Tom G adds some lovely piano, that floats out above the surging rock sounds. Slow, hard-slugging bass fills the air, and Patlansky lifts the throttle a little for the superb, slow-burning blues of 'Hold On'. Honey-sweet guitar licks melt across the room to merge with Dan's expressive and spellbinding vocals.

'Too Far Gone' brings heavy-weight, thundering rock, with Tom Swann's bass throwing the punches; the world's on fire. 'Judge A Man': the verdict is stupendous, onion-raw rock, Dan's fingers dance along the fret of his battered Strat, bringing the world to its knees, under rolling thunder. Dan drops into a solo guitar opening, before the drum ticks in and guitar warms for 'Big Things Are Going Down'. Beautiful guitar slowly seeps into our minds, rising into an electrifying lead before falling away to nothing more than a slow pulse. A stunner. My scribbled, spidery notes say simply: wow!

There's a bit of raw rock to come, as Dan Patlansky's fast-fingered riffs weave over storming drum and bass, not forgetting the crucial keys filling every jagged crack.

'My Chana' is an opportunity for Tom, Tom and Jay to showcase their undoubted talents, and Jay lets rip on a spectacular, atmospheric, storm-driven drum solo. Dan's expression says it all, as he soars away into the heavens, carried by superb floating guitar. He faces his Stratocaster, picking and poking at, flipping, and flexing the reverb springs. The ecstatic audience demand an encore, and the band willingly oblige, delivering the dirty rock blues of 'Dog Day'. We've all been there, let's be honest: a biting, blistering rocker to close a rock-riven evening at The Artrix.

Walter Trout & Wille & The Bandits

Robin 2, Bilston | 26th Nov '18

Christmas came early for blues lovers as six-string legend Walter Trout, and new world blues-rockers Wille And The Bandits roll into town to rock the Robin. As queues form, the excitement is palpable as punters chat about the last time they caught Trout perform, whilst others murmur their appreciation for the Bandits during recent festival appearances. As we are ushered through the doors expectations linger in the air.

The lights drop and we are greeted by the expressive six-string bass of Matt Brooks of Wille And The Bandits, creating an intoxicating, introductory lead groove. Drummer Andy Naumann takes his seat and joins with an inventive display behind the kit. Wille Edwards adds waves of delicious slide guitar, taking the already potent sound to a new high, adding his gravelly tones to the mix. The band whip up a storm as they deliver the 'Bad News', pushing the boundaries of the blues, mixing the power of Cream and the loose funk of The Jimi Hendrix Experience with world rhythms. Andy beats out a rhythm on a Djembe to signal an inspired and inventive take of Peter Green's 'Black Magic Woman'. Andy flips between his regular kit and the acoustic percussion, whilst Wille again showcases his dexterous use of guitar to the obvious delight of the audience. The penultimate, swagger of 'Jack The Lad' sees Wille holler out an impassioned and believable "well you don't need love baby....you just need me" and on this form, who's to argue?! With mention of a brand new album in the new year, the trio conclude their set with a contagious, funk-licked finale in the shape of '1970', to the rapturous applause of fans and new converts alike.

Having been suitably heated to the boil by a scintillating opening set, the capacity audience, down their drinks and surge forward as Walter Trout and his band file onstage. A quick crank of his guitar and we're away, as he tugs and bends exotic shapes from his Fender ably backed by the driving rhythm section of Micheal Leasure (drums) and Johnny Gripovic (bass), whilst fresh from the US, Tommy Zigzag adds evocative keyboard fills as the band kick into 'Life In The Jungle'. From such a powerful opening salvo, Trout follows up with a brand new track entitled, 'Me, My Guitar And The Blues', letting us into a secret: there's a new album on the way. Aptly titled 'Survivor Blues' slowly burns, it's set to be yet another spine-tingling masterpiece as the emotion seems to ring through his Mesa-Boogie amp, whilst he peels off another evocative solo.

Walter, obviously enjoying himself, delivers one liners on his time spent treading the boards with Canned Heat and the resulting damage that led to his liver transplant, before offering a choice selection from his therapeutic comeback album, Battle Scars. The moving 'Please Take Me Home' sees Trout stare at his own mortality, as he faces death square on. You can practically see the passion pore from the blues survivor as he explores his guitar and delivers a suitably warm yet weathered lead that can't help pull at the heart strings. In a similar vein, Walter borrows from Blind Willie Johnson as he fights back proclaiming "I ain't ready for the cold cold ground". His band rally round him with a flurry reaffirming his desire not only to live, but to return triumphantly to the blues.

Trout beckons regular cohort, (and Deep Purple aping) Andrew Elt to the stage for a near metallic romp through 'Playin' Hideaway', before a further nod to his roots brings out John Mayall's brother Rod, for a sensitive take on the Jimmy Trapp tribute, 'Blues For Jimmy T'. The band showcase their talents, before wringing out every last drop of energy much to the delight of his loyal followers.

Trout has performed at the Robin 2, nigh on twenty previous occasions and it's easy to see why they continue to ask him back, despite his advanced years and previous battles with ill health, Walter is, as previously mentioned, a true survivor and continues to thrive each and every time he straps on that trusted Strat, with his crack band, and Wille And The Bandits in tow this will surely go down as one of the hottest shows of the year.

How to be a Stand-up Comic!

Last month, Slap Mag brought you the first of a two-part guide to becoming a Stand-up comedian, looking at how to write some comedy material. In this edition, we're going to examine the best way of taking this to the stage, giving you the best possible chance of success!

It's not likely you're going to get an offer to play the O2 just yet, so start small with one of the many local open mic nights that run in pubs and other venues throughout the area. Social media and an online search will turn up a wide variety of potential gigs.

It's much better to go and watch first, before you decide to perform. That way you'll get an idea of the kind of gig it is, audience size, level of professionalism etc. It's also a chance to get to know other acts and, importantly, whoever runs the night as you'll need to get their agreement if you want a spot in the future.

If you want to look as professional as you can, there is no substitute for learning your material (often you see acts who write 'cues' on the back of their hands but if you can avoid this, you'll look really slick).

Make sure you rehearse out loud and try recording your set so when you listen back, you'll get a sense of how it will sound to the audience, this helps to improve your delivery no end.

On the night of your performance, make sure you arrive in plenty of time, don't worry about where you are in the running order (if you're funny it doesn't matter!) and don't make the mistake of downing too much 'Dutch Courage' before you're on, it honestly won't improve your memory or comic timing.

There is no 'silver bullet' for comedy, you only find out what works through trial and error, but don't be surprised if they don't laugh at your best gag, or are rolling in the aisles when you say something you don't think's particularly funny, just learn from the process.

The more gigs you do, the better you'll get, but for now, just get that first one under your belt and be proud of yourself that you did it!

Theo's Comedy Skool runs as 5 weekly workshops at Artrix in Bromsgrove from Monday February 25th 2019. Contact the box office, or email comedytheo@hotmail.co.uk

Soul Ledbury The Royal Hall | 3rd Nov

The night for me began in the car park of the local police station. As I reversed my car and parked up for the short walk along the narrow road, buttressed by looming historic buildings, leads in to Ledbury town centre and to the Royal Hall.

Soul Ledbury were celebrating their first anniversary of putting Ledbury on the Soul map; on paper the first anniversary celebrations were as ready as a restless child on Christmas eve. Mike, Alister and Heather intended to do it in style and that is just what they did. We know in our society that one should never "discuss politics or religion." Comfortingly, for this established event it is all about religion and the belief in the religion that is Northern Soul and that is why the phalanx ascended the Hall in considerable numbers. Comfortingly, politics has nothing to do with Soul Ledbury and on the night in question; it was strictly dancing that was at the forefront of the believer's minds on this Saturday night...

Mindful of the generational game, looking across the heavily congested dancefloor, tighter than a Two Ronnies sketch, many were attempting to turn back the hands of time as their dancing feet defied the week's pressures and distractions. For five hours, as a result of 5 DJs, perhaps time wasn't won back but it was delayed for one wonderful moment as the converted set out to shake, shimmy, slide, spin and "stomp" to the music that defined an era and in many instances...them.

The Soul club's logo consists of two images. One of the images is of the Market Hall, a superb building rising up like the Royal Hall in the centre of town. And like the Market Hall, Soul Ledbury are black and white, they deliver a good quality night of Soul, no grey areas and no other asides. The politics of the town council may pervade the Market Hall but Soul Ledbury are content to do what they do best. The second image of the "clenched fist" is a querulous one, for some, who knows who Tommie Smith and John Carlos are? Following Saturday night at the Royal Hall I guess the "clenched fist" still suggests defiance, solidarity and yes, celebration.

Having made my way through the jostling crowd to get to the door, I descended the steps, crossed the constricted road that has to be carefully manoeuvred and turned down one of four blind corners, all the while thinking that the Soul police would have struggled to reverse down these roads at speed...

*Please note, the next event will be held on 15th of February 2019, at the Royal Hall, Ledbury, HR8 2EY. 7pm until 12, all £5 of the door tax goes to a very worthwhile charity.

The Desperados

The Sociable Beer Company | Fri 14th Dec

It's another chilly night in the dark backstreets of Worcester, where the warm, crowded Sociable Beer Company looks like a welcome escape! Cheltenham-based, barnstorming band The Desperados are setting up, just on the other side of the glass. Time for a beer.

The trio of Blake, Robbie and Karolina, certainly look the part. A heavily bearded Blake leads from the front, like a Ned Kelly figure. They bring a crunching rock groove, with blues stripes, demanding that you let your hair down and party. The Desperados are soon cruising across the Southern States; "Mississippi King" is a ripping rock blues that sees Robbie paddling his bass through humid air. The engines build up to full pressure for the cracking "Hard To Handle", and Karolina thrashes her drums, battering cymbals into submission.

We're in a brewery, so it only seems right to bump up the rhythm. Robby and Karolina fire in their salvo's while Blake leads us into the aptly named "Beer Drinkers And Hell Raisers", with a guitar chaser to follow this heady round. The mad "When The House Is Rocking" rocks the joint, as we head towards a break, but not before Blake takes the sting out a little with a lovely, mellow, slow blues rock song, "Wicked Game", before stamping back with their second set.

Their own sultry blues, lifted from their EP Foxy Lady, regains the attention of the crowded bar. The Desperados bite hard into the night, their axes threatening anyone in reach, as might be expected from this gang of renegades. A fire-cracking "Jumpin Jack Flash" gets all feet stomping along to the old Stones favourite.

A rich shade of blues colours this second set, with "Born Under A Bad Sign" and "The Thrill Is Gone" allowing Blake his BB King moment, as well as the ever addictive "Cocaine", and even a touch of Hendrix' "Voodoo Child".

The band sign off with Robby standing high on a table, with hair flowing, and a bandana tied around his wrist; Blake and Karolina are having fun, too, "Going Down Slow". It had been a wildly entertaining evening in a venue that was new to me, but obviously not to the crowd who had filled the place, bringing an atmosphere and much needed warmth to the evening. The Desperados escaped back to Cheltenham, but no doubt will be raiding Worcester regularly in the new year, well worth looking out for; a fun-filled, hard rocking gig.

Nozstock The Hidden Valley 2019

Rowden Paddocks, Bromyard, Here | 18th - 21st July

Did you know Nozstock is one of the UK's longest running festivals? And yet, somehow, nearly 21 years since its inception, the Herefordshire festival still feels like an exciting newcomer. Without doubt, that's due to the efforts of the family-led team behind it. Their endless supply of ideas keeps things fresh and new, every single year.

Also, at the heart of Nozstock is a come-one-come-all ethos, and over the last two decades that has been message has been received loud-and-clear by festivalgoers, with people of all ages now in attendance at the event. And not only do they arrive in droves, they're coming back, year in, year out. In large part, that comes down to the "small festival, with a big heart" description, often bestowed upon the event.

So what's new?

Now with the 20th anniversary in the rearview mirror, all eyes are firmly fixed on 2019's festival. A key part of the planning this time around has involved plans for an even bigger emphasis on younger folk and families that plan to attend Nozstock for a weekend getaway.

"We wanted to announce some new elements for next year [2019], after listening to feedback and realising there were some simple things we can do to enhance the experience for families", says Ella Nosworthy, who runs the festival with her father and the rest of her family.

Dan Barker

Among those "simple things" are some changes to camping for families. For one, there will now be a limited amount of pitches – 5m<sup>2</sup> in size – made available in advance. This'll help ensure families who need extra space can get it when they book. In addition, there will be extra space within the family camping area, full stop, while child-friendly toilets will also be introduced this year.

If that's not enough, supplies will be made available to family campers – while stocks last, of course – including loo roll, wet wipes, sanitiser, sun cream, toothpaste and more. There'll also be a dedicated breastfeeding space. In short, the Nozstock team plans to cover all bases.

But none of that would count for anything without entertainment for the little people. Fear not, though, as the Little Wonderland Kids Area returns in 2019, with workshops in break dancing, graffiti, beat boxing, felt-making and up-cycling of clothes all planned. So, that end of things is more than covered. Oh, and entry to that is completely free too.

Tickets: from £125 for adults, while under 12s get in for free

Robbo's CHILLI ROULETTE Nuts

Hand crafted with passion and heat.
Baked using the finest Chillies.

Why we should go nuts for nuts:
Cashews and Almonds can lower cholesterol and help reduce heart disease. Also great brain food, high in fibre, Vitamin E and rich in iron. And let's not forget about the poor peanut which is technically a Legume!! This boosts memory and helps with depression. As for Chillies, they are a rich source of Vitamin C (twice the amount of citrus fruit). Gives a natural high by releasing endorphins.
